Forum participants will have the opportunity to:

1. Establish business relations with representatives of leading universities and international law firms.

2. Listen to reports on the development of competition law, international co-operation in humanitarian field, digital law, legal education development, comparative law, criminal law, and constitutional law.

3. Exchange their scientific and practical experience in addressing legal and economic challenges that have arisen and are arising in the context of the changing paradigm of the world order.

The main objective of the Forum. In the context of the global economic crisis, legal regulation of social relations in the field of economic development is becoming increasingly important both on a national and international level.

In order to find compromise and effective solutions to such challenges in the current context, the Forum aims to

1. Exchange the experience among legal practitioners and theorists on international economic co-operation.

2. Ensure that the general professional public has access to the methods used and suggested ways of addressing currently emerging challenges.

3. Set tasks for theoretical practice-based understanding of economic relations and their legal regulation in the framework of international co-operation under the pressure of sanctions.

4. Formulate practical and theoretical suggestions aimed at improving the existing tools of international economic and legal co-operation.

The objectives of the Forum are outlined by its sponsors:

- seeking new research ideas to enhance the effectiveness and expand the cultural diplomacy community in European and Asian countries;

- ensuring the continuity of traditions and long-standing dialogue with friendly States;

- rallying the creative potential of Forum participants aimed at formulating new meanings, strategies and methods of cultural diplomacy as a "soft power" in the context of today's threats and challenges;

- consolidating relevant diplomatic efforts;

- developing a strategy for the development of Russia's legal system based on the use of digital technologies;

- expanding cultural partnerships of countries with organisations and national cultural associations;

- deepening scientific and research co-operation between universities, associations and unions in the field of law and economics of European and Asian countries;

The participants of the Forum are highly qualified lawyers and economists who make reports on the most challenging problems encountered in the Russian and foreign legal systems.

The main round tables and panel discussions of the Forum annually formulate theoretical and practical recommendations and suggestions that can contribute to the improvement of national legislation of individual countries and their associations in the context of ever-changing economic challenges affecting the whole world.

This will provide an overview of the key trends required to improve legislation in this area at present.

Panel 1 “The Digital Sovereignty Policy of the Government in the Globalization Era: Experience of BRICS Countries”

The lead: At present, the issues of digitalization are inextricably bound up with those of national security, personal data protection and the implementation of projects both in public and private sectors.

The very existence of the concept “digital sovereignty” may cause numerous disputes concerning the possibility of distinguishing any national sovereignty or whether there is some kind of digital sovereignty and what would it mean.

The key point here is not only the provision of legal regulation in economical sector, including the introduction of national digital currencies, but also the regulation of the investment assets that are already available at the market, from their legal statuses to their marketability and other related issues.

An important factor of digitalization is counteracting the crime and offenses in the digital environment, which must include adopting the definitions of new types of crime, as well as prosecution and accountability of the criminals.

Alongside with the foregoing, the current agenda includes digitalization issues in variety of public areas: cultural environment, integration of artificial intellect, creation of unique online platforms to provide services to individuals and legal entities (including the so-called “smart cities” etc.). Participants of this Section will discuss the challenges and prospects of adapting the existing legal arrangements to the rapid development of technologies such as artificial intellect, blockchain, biotechnology and digitalization. The emphasis will be made on protection of intellectual results in the context of the global digital communications, as well as new patterns of legal regulation designed to boost innovations and provide the balance of interest between authors, business and public. The section will address the international standards, practices and potential development trends of the intellectual property legislation, and contribution of legal institutions in support of technological advancement and innovative strategies promoted by the states. The discussion will provide the basis for recommendations to improve the legal instruments in the face of the vast scientific and technological transformation.

FORUM PANEL DISCUSSIONS: KUTAFIN MOSCOW STATE LAW UNIVERSITY (MSAL)

10.00AM–12.00PM (MSAL HOUSE OF SCIENCE).

Panel 3. The international applied research conference in a form of a strategic session “The Legal Support of Technological Leadership in Environmental Protection, Efficient Management of Natural Resources and Food Security: the Experience of Russia, BRICS and EAEU Countries” (to mark the 95th anniversary of the Kutafin Moscow State Law University (MSAL))

(TIME LIMIT UP TO 10 MINUTES)

The lead: Regulatory support of technological leadership is the national development goal of the Russian Federation. The national project “Technological Leadership” includes a number of areas which require the appropriate legal groundwork. The environmental protection, efficient management of natural resources and food security represent the sectors of special national interest for the Russian Federation. At the same time, Russia would be interested in learning the experience of EAEU and BRICS countries. The Conference will include discussions both of theoretic legal concepts and the legal regulation and strategic planning issues concerning the technological support of environmental protection, efficient management of natural resources and food security in Russia and the integrations to which Russia belongs. The purpose of this strategic session is to determine, based on the legal analysis of regulation and strategizing in the Russian Federation and the experience of other EAEU and BRICS countries in the sectors of environmental protection, efficient management of natural resources and food security, the most appropriate Russian regulatory model to ensure the technological support of the environmental protection, efficient management of natural resources and food security.

Panel 4. Strategic Russian and Indian Partnership in Digital Economy in the Context of International Cooperation and Technological Progress.

(TIME LIMIT UP TO 10 MINUTES)

The lead: We now live in the historically unstable period of rapidly changing, competitive, state-of-art and turbulent environment of the digital economy. The concept of "digital economy" was codified as an economic activity which is carried out online with use of digital technologies of communication between people, businesses, devices, data and operations. The issues arising from the growth and development of digital economy and its place in the market models of the Indian and Russian societies are keys to the development of both economies. The purpose of this discussion is to determine the role of digitalization in the areas of digital infrastructure such as digital competence, electronic governance, online payments, artificial intellect, e-commerce, sustainable development based on the digital technologies, and the related system of laws and regulations.
