“THE IMPACT OF GLOBAL CHANGE ON INTERNATIONAL LEGAL COOPERATION»

The new economic reality forms the prerequisites for revising the priorities of international legal cooperation. Global changes are taking place in the normative regulation of financial relations as well as in the digitalization of the institution of law in general. Globalization affects the law, but can globalization change the law? Aspects of international legal cooperation are shifting in the face of global changes to the problems of protecting the rights of citizens, the social state, and the sustainable development of society.

Questions for discussion:

1. Impact of globalization on modern law: trends in legal globalization.
2. Globalization of human rights.
3. Problems of trust in law and digitalization.
4. Integration processes in a changing world.
5. Forms of legal integration under conditions of global digitalization

«LAW AND HUMANITARIAN COOPERATION AS A TOOL OF SOFT POWER:
NEW EXPERIENCE OF THE EU, CIS, ASIAN AND LATIN AMERICA COUNTRIES»

Humanitarian cooperation between Russia and Asian, CIS and EU countries is an effective instrument of “soft power”. Contextually, humanitarian cooperation covers a wide range of problems of social development and national stability. The law acts as a linking and mediating element between society and the state and the political system. The stereotypes of humanitarian cooperation are being reconsidered, many countries, including the EU, CIS and Asia, are improving legislation based on the global tasks of the new world order.

Questions for discussion:

1. Adapting law to technological and economic globalization.
2. Technological society and law in the context of global economic crisis
3. Economic and legal problems of new alliances in Eurasia
4. The Kyoto Protocol and international legal aspects of climate change prevention: experience of the CIS and Asian countries.

PANEL DISCUSSION 2

ACADEMIC COUNCIL HALL, 16:00–18:00

«CURRENT PROBLEMS OF COMPARATIVE LAW: CURRENT STATE AND PROSPECTS FOR DEVELOPMENT IN THE CONTEXT OF DIGITALIZATION»

Digitalization is both a new challenge and new prospects for the development of law. Comparative legal research in recent years has focused on the field of legislative support for the use of digital technology in environmental, medical, civil, criminal law, court proceedings. Comparative law is objectively interconnected in the context of interdisciplinarity, in this regard, theoretical and methodological problems of national law are considered through the prism of dynamic transformations of legislation taking into account the best foreign and domestic experience.

Questions for discussion:

1. Transformation of law as an evolution of its forms and origins
2. Dichotomy and formalism in law.
3. Problems of law enforcement heterogeneity
4. Ethical norms as law regulator
5. Features of law regulative mechanisms in modern conditions of legal science development.

PANEL DISCUSSION 3

AUD. 33 , 14:00–16:30

«NEW DIRECTIONS IN THE LEGAL REGULATION OF INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY IN EURASIA IN THE ERA OF GLOBAL ENVIRONMENTAL AND SOCIAL CHANGE»

Patent protection is a powerful incentive for scientific and technological progress, since it allows the patentee, through a temporary monopoly on the use of the invention, to compensate with profit the costs of its creation. On the other hand, in exchange for this, society gains access to the disclosure of the essence of the invention. In this way, each new knowledge gives birth to even more progressive knowledge. This process is endless as long as humanity exists.

In an era of global economic and social change, regional patent systems are becoming increasingly important. They make it easier to obtain patent protection for member countries, often covering whole regions of the globe. Regional patent systems avoid duplication of very complex and costly patenting procedures at the national level.

This allows the member states not only to save financial and material resources but also to redirect them to work in the industrialized regions of their countries, focus on creating in-country conditions for securing rights arising out of patent protection, targeted training and retraining of local patent specialists.

Questions for discussion:

1. The evolution of patent law and its transformation in today's globalized world economy;
2. The place and role of regional patent systems in the Eurasian patent space;
3. Digital technologies in the field of patent law in the context of digitalization;
4. Granting legal protection in the form of a single Eurasian trademark, a single Eurasian utility model.

PANEL DISCUSSION 4

AUD. 33 , 16:45–18:45

«MODERN TRENDS IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF PRIVATE LAW IN THE ERA OF DIGITALIZATION»

The project is implemented as part of the «Priority-2030»
strategic academic leadership program

The modern period of development of private law is due to the introduction of new digital technologies in civil circulation.

It is necessary to form an idea of digital opportunities in the global economic and social processes, the convergence of new technological possibilities and private law, to create a theoretical basis for the further revision of the content and transformation of private law at the stage of formation of new legal content.

Questions for discussion:

1. Problems of private law doctrine, methodology and legal practice in the era of digitalization.
2. Conceptual approaches to the development of civil and procedural legislation in the development of new digital technologies.
3. Civil-legal regulation of digital rights and electronic transactions.
4. Transformation of private legal and procedural relations with the use of artificial intelligence.

«GLOBAL REFORM OF LEGAL REGULATION OF INTERNATIONAL DIGITAL BUSINESS: PROBLEMS AND PROSPECTS»

A global transformation of the legal regulation of international taxation is under way, affecting both national legislation and international tax agreements. The most serious changes concern the sphere of digital economy, for which special rules are being rapidly created in different countries and there is an international dialogue on the development of unified country approaches.

Questions for discussion:

1. Legal forms of introduction of tax rules for the digital economy
2. Correlation of national and international rules for taxation of the digital economy
3. Analysis of existing practices of taxation of cross-border digital transactions
4. The role of international organizations in global digital economy tax reform.

«CURRENT CHALLENGES OF LEGAL REGULATION OF CROSS-BORDER RELATIONS IN CYBERSPACE: INFORMATION SOVEREIGNTY, CYBERSECURITY, AND DISPUTE RESOLUTION»

The project is implemented as part of the «Priority-2030» strategic academic leadership program

Large-scale introduction and use of information and communication technologies in public and state activities, as well as increased threats to cybersecurity of the state necessitate the development of adequate legal regulation of social relations in cyberspace. This request is particularly relevant in the context of sanctions pressure from Western countries due to the military operation of the Russian Federation in Ukraine.

Questions for discussion:

1. E-commerce. Cross-border consumer contracts.
2. Information sovereignty (sovereign Internet) and cybersecurity.
3. Digitalization of dispute resolution. Online ADR.
4. Digital intellectual rights in cross-border commerce.
5. Artificial Intelligence in Cross-Border Legal Relationships.

«INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION AND THE DEVELOPMENT OF INTEGRATION LAW IN THE CONTEXT OF DIGITALIZATION»

In the context of the modern scientific and technological revolution, there is a marked change in the main trends and forms of the globalization process. Thus, digitalization not only has a direct impact on the pace of integration, its specificity, but integration itself, its mechanisms of legal regulation begin to affect the latest digital technologies and interact with them as large-scale tools of globalization.

Legal mechanisms for regulating integration processes are changing, and new approaches and concepts of legal regulation of the latest digital technologies are being developed within the framework of integration organizations, primarily in the EU. At the same time, the emergence of innovations in the regulation of digital legal relations in individual countries is quickly combined and borrowed at the supranational European level, the study of which is of particular importance, especially in the framework of the Union State of Russia and Belarus and the EAEU.

Questions for discussion:

1. The influence of legal mechanisms used in integration formations on the development of legal regulation of the latest digital technologies.
2. How can digital technologies influence the development of integration processes and vice versa?
3. Does integration, digitalization, artificial intelligence, and the development of networking processes change globalization relations in today's world?
4. How does integration influence the development of platform law and the formation of ecosystem law?
5. What new trends are observed in EU law, including under the influence of digitalization?

STRATEGIC SESSION: «LEGAL REGULATION UNDER ENVIRONMENTAL THREATS AND CLIMATE CHALLENGES AND THE DEVELOPMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL LAW IN RUSSIA AND ABROAD»

The project is implemented as part of the «Priority-2030» strategic academic leadership program

Sustainable Development Goals until 2030 it is necessary to develop a set of measures for adaptation to climate change. This is one of the directions of modern international cooperation, including the definition of science-based legislative proposals for the prevention of climate change and adaptation to it.

Adaptation to climate change is recognized as a national task of the Russian government. Russia's strategic planning documents provide for a transition to a low-carbon economy. This leads to the transformation of environmental law and the need to identify new environmental legal regulators based on a conceptual model of legal regulation of social relations.

Questions for discussion:

1. Analysis of international and foreign legal regulation of adaptation to climate change
2. Definition of the state policy and the main directions of strategic planning in the sphere of nature management, environmental protection and adaptation to climate change

3. Discussion of methodology for determining the conceptual model of legal regulation of social relations in view of climate change
4. Formation of proposals on improvement of legal regulation of environmental relations in conditions of adaptation to climate change.

The project is implemented as part of the «Priority-2030»
Strategic Academic Leadership Program

The globalization of economic life in the world, as well as an increased degree of integration, which has historically developed exactly in the banking business, has generated common problems for all banks, including problems of legal regulation of banking activities. Lawyers and economists from all countries need to address these problems through an exchange of views in order to develop a common position and take into account the best international practices. The discussion platform of our Forum devoted to current problems of banking law in the global economy is the best place to implement the ideas of any specialist working in the banking sector and to find like-minded people.

Questions for discussion:

1. Digitalization of banking and legal issues
2. Banking associations and banking ecosystems: a look into the future
3. Protection of consumers of financial services in a globalized banking environment.
4. Increasing financial literacy of population in conditions of increasing complexity of financial products

«CURRENT ISSUES OF SCIENTIFIC AND PUBLISHING ACTIVITIES IN THE FIELD OF LAW»

The event will consider modern problems of publishing activities, including copyright issues, specifics of the publication activity of authors, the specificity of electronic publishing, as well as other topical issues in the field of publishing activities.

Questions for discussion:

1. Current problems of publishing and editing.
2. The problem of distribution of compulsory printed and electronic publications.
3. Role and value of scientific citation indices for development of journals with regard to the changing international legal agenda.
4. The use and obtaining of an ISBN.
5. Methods of preparation and design of electronic publications.
6. Regulatory and technical basis for the preparation of printed and electronic editions of journals.
7. Publishing and translation.
8. Rating of scientific journals and the development of publication activity in the university.

Key areas for discussion :

1. Reviewing issues: development of a culture of «scientific reviewing», strategies of interaction between the editorial board of a scientific journal, reviewers and authors: are there opportunities for standardization and systematization of such interaction, the possibility of «encouraging» reviewers, not contrary to the principles of academic ethics. Development by scientific journals of codes of ethics for authors and reviewers
2. Issues of editing and proofreading: problems of scientific editing, selection of specialists for scientific editing and proofreading of texts of articles, monographs, collections of articles. Unification of requirements to design of articles, lists of references and sources: the

- choice of «system of footnotes and citations» (referencing styles). Possibility to employ foreign specialists for editing and proofreading of texts in foreign languages. Issues of cooperation and exchange between editorial boards of journals (publishing houses)
3. Publication in open and closed access journals: advantages and disadvantages for publishers, authors, reviewers. Problems of «transparency» of editorial policy
 4. Development of a methodology of comprehensive analysis of scientometric indicators for journals (and other types of publications) and authors. Opportunities for changing the system of motivation and encouragement of authors for participation in research projects and preparation of publications based on their results, for publications in rating (including foreign) journals.

The project is implemented within the framework of joint activities of Kutafin Moscow State Law University and Rossotrudnichestvo together with the Russian Council on International Affairs (RIAC)

Russia and the European Union are parties to the international climate regime, as well as those thanks to whom this regime was created. Moscow and Brussels were among the first to commit themselves to reducing greenhouse gas emissions in the atmosphere under the 1997 Kyoto Protocol. Cooperation between Russia and the European Union is not limited to the international climate regime. The parties have 27 years of experience in bilateral cooperation on environmental and climate change issues, the basis of which was the 1994 Partnership and Cooperation Agreement (PCA).

Since 2014, many cooperation mechanisms between Moscow and Brussels have de facto been frozen, and cooperation between the Russian Federation and the European Union under the PCA has been declining. But EU-Russian cross-border cooperation programs continued to function. In 2019, tensions between Moscow and Brussels emerged in the climate track of bilateral relations after the presentation of the EU Green Deal. The deal provoked a negative reaction from Moscow because, as an internal EU agreement, it had an impact on the Union's partners, especially in the economy. It also raised questions about how Russia and Russian companies should harmonize their environmental parameters and regulations with new EU norms.

In the spring of 2022, the European Union imposed further sanctions against Russia that affect joint environmental and climate projects, and suspended its participation in cross-border cooperation programs, which had been in place until then.

Questions for discussion:

1. How should Moscow and Brussels interact in the new legal and economic realities when bilateral treaties and agreements are de facto not in force?
2. How do Russia's and the EU's sanctions policies affect the parties' climate relations?
3. Is it possible for Russia and the EU to agree to take the climate agenda and climate projects off the table?
4. What are the risks and prospects of bilateral cooperation between Russia and the EU in the field of sustainable development?

«DEVELOPMENT OF CRIMINAL LAW IN RUSSIA, THE EU, ASIAN AND LATIN AMERICAN COUNTRIES: THEORY, METHODOLOGY, AND PRACTICE»

The main function of criminal law is to protect the most important social relations from criminal attacks. The implementation of this function determines a wide interdisciplinary relationship of criminal law with other spheres of social life within the subject of criminal law protection. The development and evolution of protected social relations predetermines the change of criminal law norms, raises questions about the feasibility and limits of punitive impact under the conditions of legal transformation taking place under the influence of digitalization and globalization, as well as socio-economic disasters and pandemics.

Questions for discussion:

1. Contemporary criminal policy and the quality of criminal law
2. Criminal law in a system of intersectoral linkages
3. Transformation of criminal law in relation to the development of digital technology

«SPECIALIZATION OF JUDICIAL ACTIVITY IN THE CONTEXT OF DIGITALIZATION»

The project is implemented as part of the «Priority-2030»
strategic academic leadership program

One of the main trends of our time is the complication and specialization of knowledge. These processes have also affected the civil proceedings, the participants of which often feel the need to use special knowledge and skills in carrying out certain procedural actions. It is important to take into account the fact that nowadays the issue of judicial specialization should be considered comprehensively taking into account the digitalization of justice, which requires changes in the traditionally established approaches to the concept of special knowledge and forms of their use in the process.

Questions for discussion:

1. Knowledge specialization of judicial activity in the conditions of digitalization.
2. Transformation of category «special knowledge» in modern process.
3. Traditional and non-traditional forms of use of special knowledge in civil legal proceedings.
4. Digital literacy of participants of procedure and its influence on efficiency of procedural actions.
5. Need for knowledge specialization of representatives of the parties.

«PROBLEMS OF RULEMAKING IN THE FIELD OF ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE»

Today, the legal regulation of artificial intelligence is becoming a dynamically developing area of lawmaking in various states. A number of countries have already adopted strategic documents aimed at creating an effective regulatory framework that promotes the comprehensive implementation of artificial intelligence technologies in various spheres of social life. However, despite the adoption of strategies, plans and documents of recommendatory character, there are still problems associated with the development of full-fledged normative acts in this sphere.

Questions for discussion:

1. Artificial Intelligence Law as an innovative branch of modern law
2. Artificial intelligence on the junction of law and ethics: problems of securing the balance of interests
3. Legal personality of artificial intelligence units

«CURRENT CHALLENGES OF LEGAL REGULATION OF RELATIONSHIPS BETWEEN MEDIA CONTENT PRODUCERS AND DIGITAL PLATFORMS — NEWS AGGREGATORS»

The development of the digital economy in Russia envisages such a development of modern society that will allow the Russian economy to integrate into the global space. The program «Digital Economy of the Russian Federation» dictates new requirements to the system of public administration, organization and structure of the state apparatus. But despite the fact that the implementation of the Digital Public Administration direction involves a number of serious changes to simplify the interaction between market subjects and industries and the state, and interdepartmental interaction, it does not fully meet the challenges of digital transformation. We are talking about the formation of conditions by the state to ensure the development of information and communication technologies and effective interaction between subjects of markets and sectors of the economy in the field of entrepreneurial activity. Current political developments have required a serious adaptation of the public procurement system to the rapidly changing economic conditions. State support for business is on the agenda. But also the public customers themselves need help in a difficult time of turbulence. It is necessary to ensure a balance of interests of the parties in ensuring uninterrupted supplies and purchases, as well as to organize operational activities during the crisis.

Questions for discussion:

1. Transformation of public administration system for the purpose of business development.
2. Procurement during the crisis and support measures for suppliers.
3. Circumstances of insuperable force and their impact on contractual relations.
4. Moratorium on recovery of contractual penalties.
5. Amendment and termination of contracts due to material change of circumstances.
6. «Sub-sanctioned» customers and new regime of non-public procurement.
7. Procurement on marketplaces — a new reality for customers and suppliers.

«LAW IN THE CULTURAL DIMENSION: NEW VECTORS OF DEVELOPMENT»

In a socially oriented state, law and culture are inseparable. On the one hand, the law is seen as a cultural component, and on the other hand, the legal regulation of the sphere of culture and art is important. The duality of law in the cultural dimension determines the breadth of vectors of development and raising new topical issues. Legal culture is the most important element of the legal system of any state, the cultural approach to the understanding of law in modern society is accepted a priori.

Questions for discussion:

1. Sociohumanitarian Development: Legal Symbols and Vital Values.
2. Interpretations of legal culture in political-legal space.
3. Formation of eco-legal culture.

«MODERN PROBLEMS OF TEACHING FOREIGN LANGUAGES AND LEGAL TRANSLATION IN THE AGE OF DIGITAL TECHNOLOGY»

In today's rapidly changing world, changes are also taking place at the level of educational technology and practice. The increasing complexity and specialization of knowledge requires new competencies from the modern lawyer, which requires the revision of the content of educational programs, the transformation of teaching methods. The era of digital technologies affects the work of an interpreter as well: the list of his competences is expanding, and they are not limited to a high level of foreign language skills, including legal ones. New approaches to the educational process and to the application of acquired knowledge in practice become more relevant than ever before.
